Introduction

Farnham Craft Month celebrations have been growing steadily each year as the town's craft organisations and supporters work together to celebrate Craft Town England. For 2019 we are really excited that we have the backing of the Arts Council England who have helped fund some new events as well as funded the opportunity to evaluate the events and activities. This will enable us to provide a more sustainable model for the future to benefit the crafts and the town as a whole.

The Farnham Craft Month events and activities include showcasing new talent and local craft businesses at various venues across the town, with the opportunity to join in networking opportunities and discussions at conferences, symposiums and workshops, and the chance to see and take part in various craft activities that are usually kept behind closed workshop doors. There will also be the opportunity to enter a competition to produce a local sculpture to celebrate Farnham and its Craft Heritage. We hope there is something for everyone and hope you all share the experiences you have with friends, family, colleagues and with us.

These events and celebrations of crafts could not happen without the organisations and individuals that take part, putting effort into setting up and showcasing their yearly craft activities during October. We would like to thank them all.

If you would like more information, to take part or to support the annual October Craft Month please contact us.

FARNHAM
CRAFT

Craft Town England

From the University for the Creative Arts to major museum, exhibition and specialist retail outlets and craft-related businesses, Farnham is home to both world renowned craft artists and to the next generation of emerging makers. Craft sits at the heart of Farnham's distinctiveness and this special feature was acknowledged in 2013 when Farnham was designated as England's Craft Town. The roots of Farnham's engagement with craft can be dated back to the time when Farnham exported white clay to the Romans. In the 16th century, potteries in Farnham were major suppliers of pottery to London. But its real emergence as a town with a special leaning towards craft is in the Victorian era and the establishment and great success of The Farnham Pottery, Wrecchesham, with its reputation for the distinctive style of work known as Greenware (so called because of the copper-green glaze). The establishment of The Farnham School of Art in 1880 strongly promoted the education in craft subjects as part of its curriculum, and a powerful reputation was developed that has lasted throughout the 20th century and to the present day especially in courses in textiles and ceramics. Craft courses at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels are offered at the University for the Creative Arts at Farnham, the successor institution to the Art School. Craft courses in jewellery, metalwork, glass as well as in textiles and ceramics offer today's emerging craft makers unrivalled opportunities in some of the best equipped studios and workshops in any specialist university in the country.

Farnham is home to both world renowned craft artists and to the next generation of emerging makers

The opportunity to exhibit, sell and present contemporary crafts in Farnham is a significant feature of the town's creative programme. The emergence of the Farnham Maltings as an arts centre in the 1970s has been of especial importance to the cultural life of Farnham, and the crafts have very strongly featured in its contemporary programme: right at the heart of its diverse cultural offer. There are year-round exhibitions featuring young as well as world class craft makers. There is particular focus on the craft fair, with an unrivalled series of events featuring everything from textiles to sugarcraft, drawing international audiences to the town and having a powerful and positive effect on the creative economy. Craft studios are established in the Farnham Maltings to sustain the craft infrastructure. Craft across the centuries can be seen and researched from Farnham Greenware in the town's museum through to the unrivalled collections of the Crafts Study Centre. The New Ashgate Gallery offers a diverse range of craft work for sale and is especially focused on creating opportunities for emerging makers. It promotes the creative process for all communities through workshops, talks and outreach work.

October Craft Month

Each October, Farnham hosts a celebration of craft with hundreds of opportunities to get involved with events featuring countless makers, pieces, organisations and venues, throughout the town. This is your chance to see makers in action; take a craft walk; get making and buy work from local designer makers. This year will see the most ambitious programme of events to date and will include something for all makers, would-be makers or those curious to find out more about what it means to live and work in a craft town. Here we list just some of the events taking place in 2019. Take a look at our website for the complete programme.

International Conversations

We are delighted to welcome colleagues from our partners in Craft Town Scotland and from the Craft City of Bornholm, the Danish Island who will be looking for ways to collaborate on an international stage.

What's on

Our rich culture of craft can be experienced all year round so we are also giving you a taste of some of the 'curtain raisers' taking place before the start of craft month.

EXHIBITION:

Where the Land Meets the Sea

New Ashgate Gallery

A two week exhibition of work by landscape photographers Phil Edwards, Lisa Mardell and Jo Pannifer, inspired by the magical space where sea, sand and sky meet, with contemporary silver jewellery by Tracy King.

Abstract, impressionistic and long exposure techniques and even an occasional image of a bird on the shore or a horse cantering across the sand feature in this exhibition by the three Surrey Hills-based photographers, while the jewellery work incorporates intricate textures and patterns reminiscent of the pebbles found on the shore and the movement of the waves.

KINDling Project

Creative Response

Visit the Creative Response Gallery during October to view the culmination of sculptor Walter Bailey's KINDling project. This mass participation artwork was created by many local people who made faces with pyrography on kindling sticks. The faces represent the many people that work to preserve and protect our landscapes. Walter Bailey transformed these into sculptures which will be exhibited in the gallery alongside a film of the project. Bookable workshops also available on 31st October and 1st November.

Shoulder to the Wheel

Crafts Study Centre

Shoulder to the Wheel takes as its starting point the classic 1923 book by the Farnham wheelwright George Sturt, The Wheelwright's Shop. The exhibition has been curated by the internationally-acclaimed writer and researcher Dr Glenn Adamson and is presented in partnership with The Museum of English Rural Life at the University of Reading.

The foundational object in the exhibition is a single wagon wheel from the collections of The Museum of English Rural Life. The wheel has been studied by three makers who have been commissioned to make a wheel in response to it. The exhibition will include new studio photographs by Jon Stokes, as well as associated wheelwright's tools from the collections of The Museum of English Rural Life, and sections from Sturt's handwritten manuscript of The Wheelwright's Shop kindly loaned by the Museum of Farnham.

Moving Forward: the Crafts Study Centre at 50

Crafts Study Centre

The Crafts Study Centre was founded as a charity on 1st April 1970 as a research and study collection of modern craft. Initially located in the Holburne Museum of Art, Bath, the collections transferred to Farnham in the year 2000. The Crafts Study Centre has since gained standalone accreditation status as a university museum of modern craft set in the context of the specialist arts university, in a partnership with the University for the Creative Arts. In order to celebrate 50 years, objects and archives from across the collections have been selected, to create a symbolic exhibition celebrating 50 years of assiduous collecting, exhibiting, research and writing: establishing a major contribution to craft history and understanding in England and internationally.

EXHIBITION:

What's the story behind your jewellery?

TBC

Jewellery items have a complex and long story to tell. The materials they are made out of come from deep parts of the ground, not being similar at all to the shiny materials we recognize in jewellery shops and galleries. They pass a long way until they ornament our body and signifies meaningful events in our personal life. In this event the story and journey behind these shiny products would be presented visually while highlighting crucial sustainability aspects from the industry, like high chemical usage, land degradation, human rights issues and circularity. This to encourage visitors to start thinking about the impact of their jewellery box.

Anything But the Eyes

James Hockey Gallery at the University for the Creative Arts

Anything But the Eyes is an exhibition of the fine art practice of Jennie Jewitt-Harris. The work explores the relationship that we have with our eyes, and the concerns that underpin the common reluctance to consent to donate corneas after death. Jennie's drawings, collages, and assemblages express what influences us over life-times. She uses her experience in medicine to inform her practice which considers our relationship with time, connection with others, and concerns about mortality. Jennie is a PhD student at UCA Farnham, having received the Watts Gallery/UCA Scholarship.

FESTIVAL & WORKSHOP:

Clayfeast, Tradition and Innovation

West Street Potters at Farnham Pottery

From tradition to innovation 'Clayfeast' offers a marvellous opportunity for all in the community to explore the relationship between clay and food through hands on workshops making clay 'food'. Hands and kitchen equipment; icing nozzles, Ravioli Rolling pins, Garlic Presses and pastry cutters can inspire and enable a clayfeast to remember. Heritage, history and ritual will be stitched together through events, exhibitions and shared food. Everything made will be kept and displayed on a banqueting table viewed and then destroyed with water pistols and plant sprays to reflect the cycle of destruction and remaking.

Industrial Heritage Trail

What better time than craft month to explore the town's industrial heritage? Although Farnham has never been regarded as an industrial town, industry in its broadest sense has always been present as this walk around the town centre will reveal.

Evidence for everything from the famous hops the town produced to potters from Roman times can be found in Farnham and its surrounding villages. On this walk, you'll find out about whalebone corsets, the greatest wooden roof in England, the winding of countless miles of twine and many buildings which are not really quite what they seem. You can download the guide and trail from the Town Council's website or pick up a copy from the Council offices.

Farnham Art Trail

Come on a voyage of discovery and explore the art and craft features on public display which help create a sense of place and individuality in the town. Uncover sculptures wood carvings, terracotta designs, ironwork and more on this unique trail around England's craft town. You can download a copy of the trail on the Town Council website or pick up a copy from the Council offices.
